Short Cotton Crop in Columbus.

Whitville. — People who are supposed to be acquainted with conditions say that hardly more than six hundred bales of cotton will be produced in this county this year. Normally the crop is seven or eight thousand bales. Last year as a result of reduction in the acreage and the activities of the boll weevil slightly less than four thousand bales were produced. This year there was a still greater reduction in acreage far over that of last year, and on top of that the boll weevil is already here by the thousands.

BIG DEATH TOLL IN MINE BATTLE

SCORES OF NON-UNION MINERS VIRTUALLY MASSACRED BY MOBS OF STRIKERS.

COUNTY IS OUTWARDLY CALM

All But Three Victims Imported Workers; Some Lynched, Some Burned and Majority Shot Down.

Herrin, Ill. — The death toll in the disaster, when 5,000 striking union miners attacked the Lester strip mine, being operated under a guard of imported workers, may run past the forty mark, it was said by those in touch with the situation, although thus far only 27 positively are known to be dead.

In the Herrin hospital are eight wounded men, only one a miner, and six of them are believed to be fatally injured. There were nine, but one died.

A miner told the Associated Press correspondent that he had seen 15 bodies thrown into a pond with rocks around their necks. About 20 imported miners are missing.

Checking up the death list has proved almost impossible. The victims, all but three of them imported workers, so far as known, were found scattered over an area within several miles of the mine. Some were lynched, some were burned when the mine was fired, others were beaten to death and the majority fell before the score of bullets poured into them.

"Bloody Williamson" county, so called because of several riots, was outwardly calm, but there was a noticeable undercurrent which kept everybody on edge and wondering if further trouble might be expected.

The correspondent talked with scores of miners and about half of them were certain there would be no further disorder if there was no attempt to reopen the mines, while the other half said they were afraid some of the men might not be held back. Officially, the situation was reported by county officials to be quiet.

The scenes of death were very gruesome, as in a real war.

Bodies, many with limbs shot away, lay along the roadside or were swung from trees, men wounded and dying were stretched out on the roads and in the fields, with none of the hundreds of passers-by able to lend a hand. Attempts to assist the wounded in the early part of the day brought rebuffs from the spectators, backed in some cases by drawn guns.

Later the feeling quieted down and some of the wounded were taken to hospitals.

It is understood that there will be no attempt to reopen any of the mines until the strike is settled. When the attackers went over the top in the besieged mine there were some fifty or sixty workers and guards there. What has become of those not in the known dead and wounded list can not be said. Some of them were seen in fields running, with miner sympathizers pursuing them with guns. How many escaped could not be told. C. K. McDowell, superintendent of the imported workers at the mine, was among the dead. It was said he was the first to be shot after the mine was captured and that he was given no opportunity to escape.

Hundreds of men, women and little children, some as young as four years old, surged through the morgue to view the bodies, which lay side by side on the floor, with no attempt to straighten them out. Most of them bore no identification marks. All were mangled.

British Marshal Assassinated.

London. — Field Marshal Sir Henry H. Wilson, one of England's most illustrious soldiers, who was chief of the imperial staff during the final stages of the world war, was assassinated on the doorstep of his residence in Eaton Place by two young men who gave the names of James O'Brien and James Connolly.

The assassins had loitered about waiting an hour for his return from unrolling a memorial to men of the Great Eastern railway who fell in the war. When he alighted from his motor car, Field Marshal Wilson walked up the steps, and the men fired several shots at him from close range, three of which took effect, one in the chest, one in the leg and the third in the wrist. The field marshal died before he could be taken into the house. His horrified wife heard the shooting and rushed out to find her husband's body, dressed in full uniform, lying in a pool of blood, with the sword which he had drawn to meet his assailants by his side.

License Tags Moving.

The green and white 1922-23 automobile license tags are moving out of the office of the license bureau of the Secretary of State's office at about the rate of 5,000 a day, and this number will increase during the next fifteen days. Under the law all automobiles in the State are supposed to carry the new license late on and after the first of July every year, but those who are getting their numbers now are getting them in their cars this month. There is no objection to this disposition to get every automobile properly tagged before the first day of July.

Notices have been sent to about 175,000 car owners of record in the State, and these are coming back with all forms of money in payment for the license tags. The majority of course, send personal checks or money orders, but there are many freak values sent to Raleigh in place of those regular forms of money.

Orders Special Term of Court.

Governor Morrison ordered a special term of Court in Wake County to begin July 3 for the trial of R. G. Allen, J. H. Hightower, and H. H. Massey, officers of the defunct Central Bank and Trust Company on charges of embezzlement. Judge W. A. Devin has been designated to hold the court.

The order of the Governor calling the week's term of court for the trial of criminal cases, was issued at the request of the Wake county Commissioners who adopted a resolution at the June meeting asking for the special term.

Sector Herbert E. Norris has announced that he has no disposition to effect a compromise proposed by the Allen defense by which the depositors might have approximately 75 cent on the hundred dollars. The indications now are that the case will be fought to a finish.

Governor to Visit Fisheries.

Asheville (Special). — Governor Morrison announces here that he will accompany the budget commission on a tour of inspection of the State's rivers and harbors for the purpose of making a special study of the fish, oyster and sea food products with the hope of formulating some program with which the State may aid in promoting these industries. He will be accompanied by Representatives R. A. Doughton, L. R. Varner, W. U. Everett and Senator McCain and Dewar.

The trip will be for about a week and the Governor and his party will start about July 10. Governor Morrison left for Washington after addressing the South Carolina Bankers' annual convention here and hearing a number of matters presented by attorneys from this part of the State.

CARR DEVOUTLY SPEAKS THANKS

APPRECIATES SPIRIT OF UNITY NOW PREVAILING IN RE-UNITED NATION.

GREETING TO "VETS" IN BLUE

Commander-in-Chief Wishes For All Utmost Happiness and a Safe Return to Their Homes.

Richmond, Va. — Just before leaving Richmond for his home in Durham, N. C., Gen. Julian S. Carr, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, issued a public statement in which he said:

"My thanks go to the Commander-in-Chief of the Universe for the spirit of fraternity now recognized everywhere throughout North and South and on behalf of my comrades of the United Confederate Veterans, I send word of greeting and 'God bless you' to the Veterans in Blue. No word of reassurance is needed to express the devotion of Confederate Veterans and their children to the ideals of a reunited country."

"The world has recognized that the men of the Confederacy are those whom power could not corrupt, whom death could not terrify, whom defeat could not dishonor.

"Proud of the high honor to be chosen leader of so noble an army of stalwart men, I speak for them in voicing the gratitude of our hearts to the men and women who have so cheered our lives and strengthened our hopes and trust for the fast assembling eternal reunion.

"In saying words of farewell to my comrades and their official ladies, I wish for all a safe return to their homes and the utmost happiness until we meet again in New Orleans in annual reunion.

Offer of Ford is Object of Attack.

Washington. — Henry Ford's offer to purchase and lease the government's power and nitrate properties at Muscle Shoals, Ala., was attacked again by witnesses testifying before the senate agricultural committee on the proposals designed to develop the Alabama properties. Philip P. Wells, of Middleton, Conn., former law officer of the forestry service, and administrative assistant to Gifford Pinchot, when he was chief of that service, declared he had "never seen a proposition made to the government as 'outrageous' as that made by Mr. Ford.

Chile May Agree to Compromise.

Washington. — Chile has indicated to the American state department her willingness to accept in principle the compromise plan suggested by Secretary Hughes for arbitration of the Chilean-Peruvian dispute over Tacna-Arica.

Senate Gas Probe Pushed.

Washington. — Plans for the senate investigation into gasoline price increases moved forward a step with the employment by the manufacturers' committee of Gilbert E. Roe, Madison, Wis., as counsel and selection by the committee to submit questionnaires to all oil interests on gas and oil holdings. Mr. Roe is a former law partner of Senator LaFollette, republican, Wisconsin, chairman of the committee.

To Stop Promoting Officers in Army.

Washington. — Suspension of promotion for all army officers below the grade of colonel, effective at once, was understood to have been decided upon by the senate military committee. The action was taken largely as a result, it was said, of provisions included in the annual army appropriation bill which placed a six month bar against promotions after July 1.

THE DESTRUCTIVE FORCE OF SILENCE

Now that the country is fighting its way back up the hill, and in making real headway, too, in the struggle, every thoughtful person should be interested in business. We believe that every intelligent person is. A man or woman doesn't have to be engaged in business to be interested in or constantly affected by business conditions. If one lives at all, if he eats or wears clothes and pays taxes, he is bound to feel the effects of business conditions in the community in which he lives.

This much by way of introduction to an editorial that every body will read with more than usual interest. It is the best editorial on business that has appeared in The Journal in a year. We didn't write it. We are indebted for it to Calkins & Holden, inc., of New York.

You may say it is not an editorial on business at all, but on advertising. But look a little deeper. For what is advertising, in this day, but the soul of business? The title of this editorial is "The Destructive Force of Silence." The subject matter is worthy of every man's attention. Read it and see if you do not agree with us:

"We have advertised a long while," said a manufacturer who wished to stop, "and have good will. That good will will last us for a long while. We don't need to add to it right now."

To some extent that is so. The fly wheel keeps on turning for a while after the power is shut off. But not for long. And when it stops it takes more power to shut off. But not for long. And when it stops it takes more power to start it, by six times, than it was to keep it running.

One might as well say:

"We won't buy coal now that it is so expensive, we will gradually chop up the plant and burn that in the furnace until coal is cheaper, and then we can rebuild the plant."

Good will is a fine thing to use.

But not a fine thing to use up.

Nothing is ever finished—done.

Time is destructive. Stop building up and time begins tearing down. Some things last longer than others. But nothing lasts so very long. You think of your plant, for instance, as built. But it only stays built because you are painting and repairing and gradually but constantly replacing it bit by bit.

Think how much more rapid the inevitable loss in a thing so intangible as familiarity—as reputation—as good will.

Out of sight out of mind—not in a minute but before very long.

Advertisers who stop advertising expose the advertising structure, on which they have invested much money for many years, to elements quite as destructive and more rapid in their action than those which attack and disintegrate an unfinished, abandoned building.

In almost every community you will find the ruins of an ambitious but unfinished mansion—generally called "Somebody's Folly."

Much money went into the work and then financial reverses stopped it all. And the winds blew and the rains descended and the sun warped the wood and the dampness rotted it, and rust and decay completed its ruin.

Now, an advertising structure, dependent on familiarity and reputation, can never be finished

State Farmers Meet in August

Tentative program for the State Farmers' Convention has been framed and provides for three days of entertainment and instruction and an economical vacation for the farming hosts of North Carolina. The dates are August 1, 2 and 3.

In the perfection of the program, President U. B. Blalock and Secretary W. W. Shay will make effort to induce Henry Ford to attend the convention and speak.

The convention will open Tuesday morning, August 1, with a series of greetings from state institution heads. Thereafter J. B. Howard, of the American Farm Bureau Federation; Henry C. Stewart, ex-Governor of Virginia, and Franklin Sherman, state entomologist, will speak at the afternoon session.

Wednesday morning H. S. Mobley of the International Harvester company; F. P. Latham, of the State Board of Agriculture, and Roland Turner, general agricultural agent of the Southern railway, will speak. At the afternoon session A. F. Lever of South Carolina, author of the Smith-Lever bill; Prof. E. C. Branson, Dr. Clarence Poe, Mrs. Jane S. McKimmon, Dr. E. C. Brook and Roy H. Thomas will deliver addresses.

Thursday will be co-operative marketing day. Dr. W. B. Kilgore, agricultural extension service; G. H. Norwood, president of the Tobacco Growers' association, and C. D. Matthews, will tell how co-operative marketing is actually working.

Student Job Hunters.

Scores of students out of the schools and colleges for the summer and looking for jobs until school opens again, made the weekly report issued by the State Employment Service look like another breakdown had occurred in the industrial world. Applicants for jobs outnumbered the requests for help by exactly 60.

Demand for labor, both skilled and unskilled, continues strong, and during the week placements in these two classes aggregated 486. Clerical and professional work is scarce, though well trained stenographers are in demand. There continues to be a surplus of chauffeurs and a shortage of farm help.

Registrations during the week totaled 109, requests for help, 651; referred to jobs, 640, and placed 579. Offices reported as follows: Asheville, 102; Charlotte, 139; Greensboro, 68; Raleigh, 80; Wilmington, 113; Winston-Salem, 68.

Nine Millions of Bonds Sold.

The Wachovia Banking and Trust company, the Citizens National bank and a syndicate of New York bankers who recently bought $6,000,000 of North Carolina road bonds at 4 1/2 per cent with a thousand-dollar premium on each million dollars of bonds, has exercised its option on the remaining $9,000,000, it was announced by Governor Morrison.

This makes approximately $19,000,000 of North Carolina highway bonds that have been sold, and the governor is confident that other securities may be marketed easily now if it were necessary. The buyers of the latest bonds, who two months ago purchased $6,000,000 dollar issue advertised confirmed the faith of the state treasurer and the governor in the sale as consummated.

Report on Fish Industry.

The annual report of the commissioner of labor and printing will carry figures dealing with the fishing industry in North Carolina this year, something that it has not touched on in many years now. The fisheries business is again becoming one of the bigger industries of the state and the commissioner believes the figures relating to this industry will be of a great deal of interest.

This is especially true in view of the fact that there is an awakening public interest in the fishing business since the governor and the fisheries commission are helping to stimulate interest in this once big industry in North Carolina. It again promises to become one of the biggest of the natural industries in North Carolina. The fish commission is planting many thousand bushels of oysters in the waters of Eastern Carolina this year and this together with other work of this nature will be carried on every year now, will help revive the oyster business in this state.

even to the extent that a building can be finished. We venture to say that never, in your most optimistic moments, have you felt that your advertising structure was finished and that it would shelter and protect your established business forever after.

No, you realize, when you stop to think, that the work of building must go on until the end of time. Good will is a fine thing to use. But not a fine thing to use up.
